Digital, intelligent, safe: Experience the future mobility of goods and people

Hamburg, a metropolitan region with 5.3 million residents and Germany's central logistics hub, invites you to the 28th ITS World Congress from 11–15 October 2021. The congress is the most important international industry meeting in the field of Intelligent Transport Systems (ITS).

Autonomous driving, car sharing, ride pooling – these are just a few of the future transport trends. Modern cities are facing numerous challenges: population growth, traffic jams, lack of parking space, emissions and globalised logistics. Often they have to meet ambitious targets for addressing climate change, economic growth and urban development.

The ITS World Congress is the international platform to showcase global ideas and local solutions. Come to Hamburg in 2021 to experience the future mobility that ERTICO - ITS Europe, the German Federal Ministry of Transport and we envision.

Hamburg is an EU model region for civilian use of drones and other urban air mobility technologies.

Future Mobility

Transport is experiencing the greatest transformation since the invention of the car.

The mobility of today is diverse, with digitalisation creating new opportunities for a growing market and liveable cities.

In Hamburg, future mobility is not just a vision. In more than 35 projects, innovative mobility solutions are developed, tested and realised.

Automated and connected driving will be tested on a manufacturer-independent 9-kilometre-long course in the city. Other projects include smart parking sensors, traffic-light phase assistants and on-demand shuttles. The port develops and implements intelligent logistics solutions. At the Altenwerder container terminal, automated guided vehicles transport the containers to designated locations.
